Hello friends!

Paws up, who had a great Easter break? MEEEE! I bet you all had loads of Easter eggs. I just had one, specially made for dogs. I've never had chocolate before so it was an amazing treat. I can see why it's easy to forget what Easter is really all about.

The Spring term was busy and I was ready for a break. At the end of term, I had hurt myself. If you remember, I came to school wearing a cone of shame to stop me licking the cut on my leg. My vet gave me some HUGE pink tablets which got rid of the infection and I'm all better now. I'm ready to race around on the field with anyone who wants to join me.

I'm pleased to say, my pooch pals were very kind to me while I was wearing that wretched cone. I got used to it but I must have looked a bit strange because lots of humans kept making an extra fuss of me (nice!) but some of my friends were a bit wary (boo!) It wasn't so easy to play chase because the wind kept catching in my cone making it harder to run – especially when we went to Dunstable Downs. But it was good for catching treats! I also had my first ever special ice cream for dogs – it was scrummy. No wonder you all love it!

My hoomom was very cruel to me during the holidays. She made me have a bath – yuck, yuck, yuck! I really don't understand what's wrong with having mucky paws and a dusty coat, all the best dogs do! It's so humiliating, being dumped in the water, having that stinky shampoo stuff rubbed into my fur and then having it all showered off. No self-respecting dog should have to go through that. I ought to report her to the RSPCF. I mean, what's all the fuss about?

This was an exciting day – I got a new Fidomobile! It much more comfortable than the old one; I can rest my chin on the window easily and make sure my hoomans don't go too far. I have a warm cosy bed and a cool mat and the whole back seat to myself. Lucky me! It's nice to be chauffeured about because we always end up somewhere with lots of brilliant smells, and you know how much I like to use my sniffing super power!

You'll be pleased to know I went into school for the training day and checked everything out for you. Everything is just as it should be and I cannot wait to see you all!
