As Head Teacher, I am automatically a governor of the school.

I knew I wanted to be a teacher as a teenager. I wanted to make a difference to children's lives in the same way my teachers had made to mine. I've now been making a difference for almost 30 years; first in East London and now in Hertfordshire.

I believe passionately that education is every child's key to future success. However, education must be a partnership between school and parents; children only spend one quarter of each day at school so what children learn at home is equally important.

When I'm not at school, I can often be found walking Fido (our school dog), singing or spending time with my step-grandchildren.
